

Great Game Huddle Notes

May 2nd, 2017

Character Core

Lonnie Vandiver, Code Compliance Officer, presented our Character Core for April – HUMILITY

Humility is defined as “Recognizing the people and factors that have shaped my life.”

Lonnie gave us one of his favorite quotes, “an unexamined life is not worth living”. (Socrates.) For Lonnie, humility is defined as the willingness to make peace with an honest view of who he is. Humility is a great liberator, and gives us the freedom to engage areas of our lives that need growth. Sometimes pride allows us to be offended, therefore locking us in and preventing us from getting past our own needs. Humility, on the other hand, welcomes and facilitates relationships and allows us to delight in the success of others.

1. Share the credit.
2. Ask for help.
3. Serve others.

Humility opens our hearts to gratitude and the ability to see the good in others. Being humble also gives us the ability to be merciful. “Humility is the soil in which mercy grows”, said Lonnie.

“Humility is not thinking less of yourself, but thinking of yourself less.” C.S. Lewis

Duffy Mooney, formerly of the Greene County Highway Department, was a guest at this morning’s huddle. Duffy, who left Greene County to work for City Utilities, is working on introducing the Great Game of Business to CU.
