DEFENDANT ENTERS PLEA ON THE EVE OF TRIAL

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. – Greene County Prosecuting Attorney Dan Patterson announces that Jerome Ivory, 46, of Springfield, MO entered an Alford guilty plea to assaulting the victim, his girlfriend, by striking her on the head on two different occasions. On November 16, 2012 the victim went to the hospital to receive treatment for injuries Ivory had inflicted upon her. While she was receiving treatment at the hospital the police were called and an investigation was started. Corporal Jennifer Charleston photographed multiple bruises all over the victim's body. Ivory was arrested and during an interview conducted by Detective Heather Anderson, Ivory admitted to punching the victim on the head on November 10, 2012 and November 15, 2012. During the course of this case the victim's whereabouts were unknown at one point but Prosecutor's Office Investigator Bruce Waterman was able to locate her days before trial and made arrangements for her to travel to Springfield the night before trial.

Ivory entered an Alford guilty plea before the Honorable Dan Conklin to two counts of domestic assault in the second degree contained in the felony information. In an Alford plea the criminal defendant does not admit guilt but admits that the prosecution has sufficient evidence to prove and convict on the charges at trial. Under the plea agreement, the defendant is subject to a sentence of a term of seven years in the Department of Corrections with the State opposing probation. Judge Conklin set a sentencing hearing for June 27, 2013 at 9:30 AM following a sentencing assessment report by the Department of Probation and Parole.

This case is being prosecuted by Assistant Prosecuting Attorneys Nathan Taylor and James A. Whiteside. It was investigated by the Springfield Police
